

ANCHORING OURSELVES IN AKRON

A Community Engaged Research Project

Are you interested in improving your research skills while gaining practical, hands-on experience to list on your resume? We are looking for students from all majors to work on a cross-campus research project examining how organizations build trust in communities.

Students will work as a team to design a survey and interview protocol, talk with stakeholders in Akron, and explore data analysis and visualization techniques. This [Un]class will hone skills in collaboration, communication, and community-based research and is particularly relevant for students looking at careers in communication, business, nonprofit/government, education, marketing, and community outreach/engagement.

Course number: 7600:450

Days and times: T/TH 3:30-4:45

Instructor: Dr. Amber Ferris
