

Scavenger Hunt

1: Who conducted the “Little Albert” classical conditioning study?

2: According to Stanley Milgram, why was deception necessary for his obedience study?

3: Which study is Philip Zimbardo best known for?

4: In 1-2 sentences, what was the “Cook Committee?”

5: Which psychologist studied rhesus monkeys to understand how love, attachment, and physical contact can impact the development of infants?

Scavenger Hunt

6: In 1-2 sentences, why was the critical incident approach necessary for developing psychology's ethical codes?

7: Who conducted the Robbers Cave study?

Critical Thinking Prompts

Explore the documents, audio, text from Pages 17-19: The Stanford Prison Experiment, Debriefing, and Milgram & Zimbardo. Then, respond to the following question in 1-2 paragraphs:

Briefly explain some of the criticisms directed at the Stanford Prison Experiment, both in its immediate aftermath and in the present day. Why do you think Zimbardo and his research team chose to carry out this experiment as a simulation?

Critical Thinking Prompts

View the video and text descriptions on Pages 3 and 6: Little Albert and Harry Harlow. Then, respond to the following question in 1-2 paragraphs:

Compare and contrast the “Little Albert” study with Harry Harlow’s research with rhesus monkeys. Does the fact that Harlow carried out his methods on rhesus monkeys, rather than humans, alter your perception of this research? How should ethical standards differ between research with human and animal subjects?

Critical Thinking Prompts

Read the documents and text on Pages 14 and 15: The Milgram Experiment and Robbers

Cave. Then, respond to the following question in 1-2 paragraphs:

Consider Stanley Milgram's obedience experiments and the Robbers Cave study. Do you feel that Milgram and the Sherifs were justified in deceiving their subjects? Why or why not?

Critical Thinking Prompts

Read the documents and text on Pages 22-25: Justice, The Tuskegee Syphilis Study, National Research Act of 1974, and "The Belmont Report". Then, respond to the following question in 1-2 paragraphs:

Briefly explain the Tuskegee Syphilis Study. Why was this study so controversial, and what ethical principles were violated by the research?